Files downloaded from GIT repo on shared hosting are empty I have installed git on shared hosting. I tried to clone my source code from my machine and i get all files like source code but when i opened the files downloaded from the GIT repo on the site they are empty. Is there any way i can fix this? A: So you have a shared webhosting. Git will take full files from shared hosting, but you need to set the PATH correctly on your c:/Program Files/Git/config file. Q: How do I find the actual IP address of the host? I'm writing a C++ program where I'll have to use ICMP redirect messages. I need to know the actual IP address of the computer initiating the redirect. I know this can be done with C# but I'm not familiar with that language. How do I find the original IP address of the host initiating the redirect using C++? Thanks! A: The underlying functions that OSes use to send ICMP redirects are in the Winsock API. I don't know of a C API (Microsoft seems to be working on that), but there is a POSIX-style C API. A good reference is WinSock Essentials. You should really get your hands dirty and not attempt to write this yourself. OSes are very good at this, and it isn't particularly difficult. An outbreak of Salmonella enteritidis phage type 4 from pet store-bred dogs. Salmonella enteritidis phage type 4 (PT-4) was isolated from four pet store-bred dogs and their environment. The source of infection could not be determined. Clinically, all dogs showed diarrhea. Necropsy of one dog revealed gross evidence of typhlitis. Isolations from spleen, intestine, liver, mesenteric lymph nodes, and skin were made from two dogs. In tissue culture 1cb139a0ed
