We report on the ability of iron oxide nanoparticles to enhance the photosensitized formation of radicals by hexaammineruthenium (III) hexacarbonyl (Ru(III)-hexamine) in an organic solvent-water biphasic system. When added to a biphasic system consisting of toluene-water, the iron oxide nanoparticles act as a catalyst to promote the formation of radicals from trapped hydroxyl radicals originating from the photolysis of molecular oxygen. The effect of the iron oxide nanoparticles is shown to increase the rate of the photosensitized reaction from 40-300 times for 10 ppm of the catalyst.Singapore: Stay Connected and Innovative You may have missed one of our weekly design briefs but you can still catch up on the week's developments by reviewing each one on our blog Here's a round up of all the design news headlines this week - from the Republic of Singapore, you can visit the Business Mirror'
